Nevertheless the action of the delegates in going against the wishes of their party leader underscored the fact that there is considerable restlessness within the Social Democratic party over the pace of domestic reform.

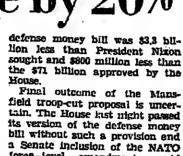

This unrest, which finds its ource in the party's left wing, reflects growing frustration over how far the Social Democrats have moved from their original Marxist ideology nnder Mr. Brandt's ieadership.

Compounding the frustration is the fact that Mr. Brandt has had to compromise and water down many of his domestic goals because his government's survival depends on maintaining the coali-tion with the small Free Democratic party.

Earlier, Mr. Brandt, in a lengthy speech to the delegates, made clear that the government's program had been framed with the primary aims of holding the coalition together and warding off a threataened economic reces-sion. He said: "What the government has adopted for its tax reform represents what is presently posible in the light of political reality."

Mr. Schiller, who also spoke, warned that the world is facing its gravest economic crisis of the postwar period and that as a result West Germany's export boom will slacken to the point where future economic growth will have to be directed increasingly inward. He said his tax and monetary policies had to be considered in this light. However, their warnings, and those of other key party leaders, went unheeded by the rank and file. The immediate impression was that the congress's vote, while obviously a source of worry for the leadership, would not have too strong an effect on Mr. Brandt and Mr. Schiller's course cial basis since then in the immediate future.

Secretary Laird termed the Senate Committee action "reckless" and also warned it would "undermine chances for the success of mutual and balanced force reduction negotiations."

But Appropriations Committee chairman Allen J. Ellender, D. La., vigorously rejected the Luird criticism. "All that talk about how it would burt our cause and burt us in dealing with the Russians—all that is so much hogwash," he told a news conference.

Meantime, anti-war forces suffered a record setback in as many days this morning when the Appropriations Committee revote an ame ment to the defense bill that would stop all military spending in Vietnam except that to withdraw remaining U.S. forces,

The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Clifford P. Case, R., N.J., was introduced in response to President Nixon's brisk statement; yesterday saying he would ignore a Congress-passed pro-vision, signed into law as part of a Pentagon procurement bill, that proclaimed it U.S. policy to pull oot American troops from Indochina subject only to re-lease of U.S. war prisoners. The amendment, supported by other anti-war senators will be offered on the Senate floor.

Late yesterday, the House de-feated, 233-184, an amendment to the big defense spending bill that would have forbidden using any of the funds for U.S. combat operations in Indochina after (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

Joblessness Sets Mark in Britain

LONDON, Nov. 1g (AP).-Britain'e worst unemployment slump since the depression of the 1930s hit a peak this month, the government announced today. The trend showed a million job-less by Christmas was likely.

Unemployment reached 970,032 earlier this month, the government said, an incease of 40,346 October and the highest total for more than 30 years. · It meant 5.5 percent of Britain's work force is now unemployed, and in Northern Ireland, one of the worst hit areas, the figure is £5 percent.

"Russia now has the initiative in weapons technology," the editors said. "Whereas for a long time it was assumed-with considerable jurtification—that the NATO of sis had a clear lead in the development of sophisticated weapons, it is now clear that the U.S.S.R. has extinguished that lead and is outstripping the West.

Despite the advance in American and Soviet efforts to reduce the risk of nuclear war, yearbook editors R. T. Pretty and D. H. R. Archer saw "less hopeful" signs for world peace in the possibility of nuclear advances by lesser powers. They mentioned in a foreword to the book the French nuclear explosion in the Pacific last summer and reports that Israei and India are now capable of building nuclear devices.

Recent advances in Soviet early warning radar, the editors said, plus "the modern Soviet Navy and the nature of its armament and equipment, and the existence of an operational anti-ballistic missile system around Moscow are evidence of the Soviet ability to take the initiative in weapon system development."

The editors added that fragmentary evidence is emerging of a number of other Soviet developments and programs, one of which is allegedly directly comparable with, but ahead of, a U.S. project. This is a new supersonic bor reported to carry the NATO designation "Backfire," and to be a variable-geometry—swingwing— machine with low altitude supersonic capability. The approxi-mately equivalent U.S. B-1 A bomber project is as yet only at the mock-up stage.

Among newer weaponry discussed in the book is a reported Israeli missile, code-named Jericho, capable of a range of 300 miles. According to "reports from Washington," the device is capable

Envoys at UN Criticize U.S. On China Talk

Nixon Response Seen As Bow to Rightists

By Anthony Astrachan UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 18 (WP).—Several diplomats complained yesterday that the official U.S. comment on China's maiden speech in the General Assembly was an attempt to placate conservative American opinion in a way that showed Washington's disdain for the UN.

The comment, issued by U.S. Ambassador George Bush Tues-day evening, said that Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hia had made a speech that was a "disappointment" and had said "nothing new in its intemperate language." Mr. Bush called it surprising and disturbing that China had decided "to launch participation in this world body by firing these empty can-nons of rhetoric."

The White House was thought to be responsible for the tone of Mr. Bush's statement but reportedly ordered him not to make it in the Assembly in exercise of the right of reply or before tele-vision cameras. It was issued as 2 press release as Mr. Bush was about to play tennis at a benefit match for African students. It is being referred to in the UN corridors as the "new tennis court

One neutral ambassador said that this presentation made the statement a milder reaction than it would otherwise have been.

Other delegates likened the statement to President Nixon'e condemnation of the way Peking apporters showed their jubilation in the Assembly hall on Oct. 25, after their victory over the United States on the question of Taiwan'e expulsion.

Some observers thought that Mr. Bush reacted more appropriately in an off-the-cuff comment after the speech Monday. when he called it a "forceful exposition of views we cannot agree with and cannot support." U.S. spokesman Nicholas King was unable yesterday to cite a single example of the "intemperate" language Mr. Bush had criticized.

Mr. Chiao himself told newsmen that Mr. Bush's statement was "not worthy of comment." Chinese spokesman Kao Liang repeated that view at first but ater said that the statement was "hostile"-and asked reporters why it had been made.

Both Western and third-world delegates said that the statement, like the whole American approach to Chinese representation, was intended to win back conservatives alienated by Mr. Nixon's de-cision to go to China and by American support for the senting of Peking in the UN.

U.S. reactions since the vote. including Mr. Bush's statement, have also cost it credibility and influence, some delegates were saying yesterday. One ambassador said that both on Oct. 25 to the coup, which was announced States acted more like a sore

Sir Alec Visits African Area Before Final Rhodesia Talks

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Nov. 18 (Reuters).—"Don't sell us out," an African shouted as British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Doug-las-Home took time off from his Rhodesian independence negotiations to tour an African township here today.

The foreign secretary drave to Highfield Township Shopping Center in a Mercedes flying the Union Jack and preceded by an unmarked car full of plainclothes police.

The Africans he talked to at the shopping center, in a school and in a housing development gave him a generally friendly welcome.

His visit to Highfield to see something of the lives of people whose political rights are at stake in his mission here followed a meeting with leaders of the Rhodesian Front, the white party that proclaimed Rhodesia's independence from Britain six.

Asked by a reporter in the township how the talks were going, Sir Alec replied: "I'll tell you more about that in a day one, have been in the atmosphere, or two."

In fact, with Sir Alec's sounding of opinion among all sections of the Rhodesian community virtually complete, the stage is set for the decisive phase of the Anglo-Rhodesian discussions on how to resolve the independence dispute.

The two sides will open a crucial plenary session tomorrow, with Prime Minister Ian Smith leading the Rhodesian side. It was widely believed here today that a settlement was within reach at last. But this was a prospect that was viewed with varying degrees of cnthusiasm. Most Rhodesian whites and the most moderate among the non-whites are pleased with the prospect. But those at opposite ends of the political spectrum-the white far right and the African nationalists fear that their diametrically conflicting interests

GS-TIES-GIFTS HAL EXPORT DISCOUNT He de la Paix - PARIS federation's president, George S. Meany, a critic of his economic stabilization plan, was disclosed as labor decided not to walk out of the 15-member Pay Board to protest its wage guidelines.

In a vote on one disputed guideline, the Senate Phnking Committee today favored giving workers back pay for wage in-creases suspended during the 90day freeze unless President Nixon decrees that they are "unreason-ably inconsistent" with his longterm economic goals. The vote Was 14-0.

The committee took the action in voting to extend the President's authority to impose eco-nomic controls for a year beyond the scheduled April 30, 1972, expiration date. It then sent a bill containing these and other economic stabilization provisions to the Senate floor. Meanwhile, the Senate Banking Committee approved an amend-ment to the Phase 2 bill which would approve retroactive payments for most wage increases not paid during the freeze.

The executive council of the AFL-CIO recommended to the membership today that its representatives "remain on the Pay Board only so long as a reasonable hope exists of securing recognition of the validity of contracts and of achieving justice for

On a 10-5 vote, with all labor members voting against, the board has issued guidelines generally limiting wage increases to 5.5 percent for the next year.

Mr. Meany's anger has been directed chiefly at the Pay Board decision that bars the back payment of wage increases suspended since Aug. 15. At the convention in Miami

How Soviet' Superspy' Louis Failed To Buy a Popcorn Machine in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18 (AP).-Victor Louis, who jokingly refers to himself as the Soviet Union's "superspy", went Christmas shopping in New York yesterday, but his legendary luck ran out: The stores wouldn't take rubles.

And none of the Americans who were with him were about to put up $2,800 for a popcorn machine to be shipped to Moscow, where Mr. Louis lives. "Maybe the Danes are more broadminded," said Mr. Louis, who left for Copenhagen after his shopping tour. "At least I can see a live pornographic show there." Except for an appointment at the National Broadcasting Co., Mr. Louis's visit to the United States was unexplained although it is known that he has had talks with government

It was in Copenhagen that Mr. Louis allegedly delivered the manuscript of "Khrushehev Remembers" to American publishers. Not long afterward, he turned up in Israel touching off a series of rumors that the Soviet Union was modifying its policies towards the Jewish state,

Mr. Louis is also the Moscow correspondent of the London Evening News, a tipster to Western newsmen in the Soviet capital, and—according to Western intelligence sources—a top intermediary for the Soviet government when it wishes to remain officially uncommitted.

A sense of urgency pervaded most of the testimony in the second day of a three-day hearing, as caucus members told of personal visits to military bases earlier this week and a 50-page report prepared by an aide to Rep. Shirley Chisholm on race relations among U.S. troops in Europe was released. The first witness at yesterday's hearings, Frank W. Render 2d, served as a deputy assistant secretary of defense for 14 months, until he was dismissed last August, and he was the highest ranking black man in the Pentagon. Mr. Render said he had "had better than equal opportunity to become aware of the critical nature and substance of the black-white racial conflict in the military services."

Leadership Failure

He commended the military for having "the most outstanding rules and regulations regarding equal opportunity when compared with any other major institution," but he added. "The problem, simply stated, is the failure of civilian and military leadership to carry out its equal opportunity responsibilities." Seven black Army officers from Fort Devens, Mass., in a joint statement read by Capt. Charlie W. Smith, stated they were "not revolutionary militants, dissidents nor anarchists. Vote on High Court Nominees Delayed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (UPI).

—Opponents of Supreme Court nominee William H. Rehnquist today eucceeded m delaying until Tuesday action by the Senate Judiciary Committee on his ap-pointment, pending further investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The committee voted, 10 to 5 against reopening hearings on Mr. Rehnquist's nomination, but Chairman James O. Eastland, D., Miss., agreed to ask the FBI to look further into Mr. Rehnquist's alleged past connections with a conservative political action group called Arizonans for America.

There apparently was no committee opposition, at a closed meeting, to the nomination of Lewis P. Powell for the other court vacancy, but the commit-tee refused, also by a 10-to-5 vote, to report his selection separately to the Senate.

Written Questions

Sen. Birch Bayh, D. Ind., said that, before Tuesday, he and possibly other senators would submit written questions to Mr. Rehnquist on allegations that he intimidated black voters in a 1964 election in Phoenix, his alleged association with Arizonans for America, and what Sen. Bay's described as "philosophical in-consistencies" in the hearing record on Mr. Rehnquist's atti-tudes toward civil liberties and

Sen. Bayh said after the nearly two-hour closed meeting that Sen. ${\it Corruption Called}$ Cause for Failure Of U.S. System

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (UPI).

—John W. Gardner, chairman of a group called Common Cause, said today that corruptionmostly official favors in return for campaign contributions—is the most serious reason for the failure of our political and governmental institutions."

r. Gardner, former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, called for strict control of campaign spending and better anti-secrecy laws to fight corruption. He made his comments in speech prepared for the National Young Democrats convention, in Hot Springs, Ark.

"Most of the political process has become, behind the scenes, a vast game of barter and purchase involving campaign contributions, appointments to high office, business favors, favorable legal decisions and favorable location of defense installations," Mr. Gardner said.

Mr. Gardner ticked off a long list of "enormous favors" that can be dispensed by federal, state and local officials, including the President. "The capacity of the President-this President or any of his predecessors—to reward his friends is immeasurable," he said. Common Cause is a private or-national assembly voted unanimously today to allow the government to take far reaching measures against subversion, including suspension of individual liberties and guarantees.

A resoltation, passed by the 87 members of the 130-man assembly who were present, said the government may adopt the "neces-sary measures," but did not spell out what they were.

News sources suggested the move could be aimed at continuing censorship of the press due to end next April. They pointed out the government already has the power to arrest and detain citizens for as long as six months without formel accusation. Flexible Wording

The sources said the flexible wording of the resolution could be applied to the country's African possessions of Portuguese Guinea, Angola and Mozambique. They noted the assembly deplored "the persistence of serious subversive acts in several parts of the national territory." Portuguese Guinea, Angola and Mozambique are referred to by the government as national territories. The government has been Premier Marcelo Caetano, in his request to the assembly for action, referred to both subversive action at home and abroad.

An urban guerrilla organization called Armed Revolutionary Action (ARA) has been harassing the government for more than two years. Its most spectacular success so far was exploding a bomb at the central post office last June and cutting communications hours ahead of the NATO foreign ministers' meeting in the Portuguese capital.

Political sources said the new powers would be used against the

Maoist 'Modesty' at the UN

"We should always be modest," Chairman Mao Tee-tung has sald. "In our international relatione, we Chinese people should get rid of great-power chauvinism resolutely, thoroughly, and completely."

China's delegation to the United Nations followed Mao's Little Red Book to the letter in this respect in its debut before the General Assembly the other day. Atlhough it did contain familiar rhetoric, United States Ambassador George Bush charged in an unnecessarily sharp rebuttal, the initial Chinese address was generally a model of "modesty."

"China is still an economically backward country as well as a developing country." Chiao Kuan-hua, the chief Chinese delegate. said. "Like the overwhelming majority of the Asian, African and Latin American countries, China belongs to the third world."

Maoist humility thus becomes a key instrument in Peking's bid for leadership of a potentially dominant bloc of developing nations in the world organization. By identifying with the poor and weak and attacking "the power politics and hegemony of blg nations bullying small ones," Mr. Chiao has skillfully exploited a rising tide of resentment against the superpowers.

That resentment was expressed dramatically Tuesday when Peking cast its first vote with 106 other nations for a General Assembly resolution expressing "grave concern" at the recent decision of Congressnever seriously challenged by the administration—to permit Americans to import Rhodesian chrome in defiance of a Security Council embargo. Only South Africa and Portugal opposed the resolution. This embarrassing American defeat symbolizes the opportunity that has been created for the Chinese and other critics of American policy by the administration's heavy-handed tactics at the United Nations and elsewhere in recent months and by a concurrent congressional retreat from international respon-

The Chinese bid for third world leadership is not without its own built-in "contradictions." Still echoing Mao, Mr. Chiao observed that "countries want independence, nations want liberation and the people want revolution. This has become an irresistible trend of history." The leaders of newly independent countries whose support Peking solicits are not likely to take kindly to the implication that their own revolutions are not already complete and their people not yet liberated.

Furthermore, the developing countries have many interests that conflict with those of China-and of each other. Mr. Chiao'e indications of support for the Palestinian guerrillas, for example, will disturb not only the Soviet Union and the United States but also many Arab governments which feel threatened by Palestinian extremism.

Nevertheless, in spite of inherent weaknesses, Peking's challenge to the traditional United States role of leadership in the world organization could be formidable if Washington persists in policiee and attitudes that offend America's friends and unite its foes. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Coup in Thailand

Thailand's reversion to absolute rule under its long-time premier, Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, reflects the mounting pressure of changing American policies on one of this country's closest allies in Asia.

Because Marshal Thanom and his associates have cast their lot heavily with the United States since they first came to power in a military coup d'état in 1957, turning their backs on an ancient Siamese tradition of neutrality, it is most unlikely that the new government will cut ties with Washington. But the abrupt dismissal of a parliament that never posed any serious threat to the ruling elite suggests that Bangkok has been severely shaken by the evolving Nixon Doctrine of self-sufficiency for Asian allies, gradual withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam and United States overtures to Peking.

In addition, the reduction of American personnel and military spending in the area and a threatened congressional cutback in aid, coupled with a weakening in the markets for Thailand's principal exports of tin, rubber and rice, have generated mounting economic problems for the regime, Economic stringencies have fed social unrest, especially in the cities where the impact of heavy American spending and heavy-spending American troops, has upset traditional Thai values, including a tradition of acquiescence to authority.

This abrupt upheaval in Bangkok should give the administration second thoughts about Thailand as a model for the Nixon Doctrins and a stable base for what is looking more and more like a policy of victory. through air power in neighboring Indo-treaty fulfills a promise made repeatedly, over an American presence on this scale. These many years, to Japan. Some months from now the administration of the Ryukyu Islands will revert to the Japanese government, whose "residual" sovereignty we recognized in the peace treaty after World War II. "I think it is to the lasting honor of our country," Sen. Cooper told the Senate, "that although it had done more than any of the other allies to bring about the end of the war in the Pacific against Japan it did not demand from Japan the cession of any of its territories."

Okinawa will continue, of course, to be an element in the politics of the Pacific. The United States continues to maintain large military bases there. A considerable body of opinion in Japan and on Okinawa

The Senate's ratification of the Okinawa criticizes Premier Sato for having accepted criticisms are likely to be sharpened by President Nixon's trip to Peking.

The Japanese are very much aware that the United States uses the Okinawa bases for reconnaiseance missions, and that the Voice of America transmitters there are chiefly aimed at China. The Japanese assume that China will hold them responsible for American activities conducted from Japanese territory. As the United States moves toward a warmer relationship with China, it creates a great pressure on other Pacific nations to move in the same direction. As the case of Okinawa will demonstrate, we cannot reasonably expect our Asian allies to seem more hostile to China than we ourselves are prepared to be.

Why would the American authorities be trying to prosecute M. Well, perhaps precisely because M. Fournier ie a member of the SDECE (Service de Documentation Extérieure et Contre-Espionnage). Everybody knows that the secret services of various countries, even allies, set traps for each other and neutralize one another as one of their principal pastimes. So much so that even if he is innocent, one can find good reasons for the troubles besetting M. Fournier, who seems to have exercised his delicate functions in the area of American affairs.

LONDON.-A decade ago, when Edward Heath was a rising British politician-statesman and the late Sean Lemass was prime minister of Eire, the two men shared a single dream.

Both thought that when the United Kingdom, including Ulster, and the Irish Republic had finally joined the Common Market, the sorry question of a par-titioned Ireland could be solved in a "European" framework. .

This dream, unfortunately, has all but vanished. British entry into Europe's club—to which Irish entry is appended as a kind. of automatic footnote—was de-layed for years by De Gaulle's twin vetoes. Now that President Pompidou has reversed the general's policy and both Britain and Hire are virtually in at last, the complexion of the Irish question has altered-for the worse.

Troubles Worse

When Heath and Lemass were India, Pakistan—A Little More Time imagining a settlement between the two Irelands as "European" states, a period of troubles had just ended (1959-1961). Those troubles, however, were far less serious than today's. A decade ago it was a question of rural difficulties along the border. Today it is a question of urban guerrillas in North . Ireland's

New techniques mark the latest upsurge of fighting. When Irewas partitioned 50 years ago, the north stayed with the United Kingdom. Eire was a Catholic state but Ulster, as the north is often called, contained a two thirds Protestant majority. More restrained leaders in each Ireland see that the logical ultimate solution must insure protection of both ardently disputing faiths, Indeed, when Heath (as Britain's chief of government) brought together Prime Minister Lynch and Prime Minister Faulkner of the two Irelands earlier this year, they spoke to each other amiably and knowledgeably almost as if Heath had not been there. But if he hadn't been, neither would they.

Heath's old hope for a settle-ment within "Europe" doesn't seem to him to go to the root of the problem any more. Urban guerrillas, representing the "provisional" wing of the IRA Orish Republican Army), are simply not interested in a political solution, he feels.

The British prime minister is regretfully convinced that even in the remote chance that a nolitical solution were arranged, the urban guerrilles would break it up. They want to produce a united Ireland by violence and Lynch would be among the first to vanish from power were such a goal attained, because the "pro-visionals", whom Heath regards as Maoist in methodology, would never agree.

Patchwork

It is these ultras with whom Britain must now deal, making it victually impossible at this time to contemplate political solution at present. The one third Catholic minority in Northern Ireland accurately complains it has no share in local rule while the Protestants use their power to keep Ulster in the United Kingdom. The latter fear being as submerged in a United Ireland as the Catholics now are in the north.

Heath apparently doesn't see any prospect of basic solution unish prime minister would have to name members of such a commission, those Catholics he designated would be objected to by pro-Eire ultras. The suggestion of a coalition regime has similar weaknesses. It is hard to contemplate a Belfast cabinet including nationalists, Protestant Paisleyites, and Catholic extremists. Indeed, Heath seems to feel that no compulsory political coalition has ever really worked anywhere. Therefore, the realities of the WASHINGTON - Theiland's sudden loss of parliamentary government with the army selving full power was the third the hazardous life-span of dem-ocratic rule in Southeast Asia.

For the Nixon administration, caught in an unprecedentedly intense struggle with Congress over foreign aid, the retrogres-sion could not come at a more mopportune time.

Each setback has supplied new ammunition to the administra-tion's adversaries on Capitol Hill to challenge the effectiveness of the Nixon doctrine in supporting freedom and democracy: South Vietnam's uncontested re-election of President Nguyen Van Thieu on Oct. 3, the suspension of Cambodia's National Assembly on Oct. 20 and now the military takeover in Thailand

In each case there has been embarrassment for the United States, which is the major military and economic supporter of all three nations. But in the case of Thailand Wednesday, as in the previous instances, American officials indicated that no variation in U.S. policy is expected or likely.

NEW DELHL-At any other time in the past, the military clashes now occurring between India and Pakistan on their borders some of battalion sizewould immediately have begun a full-scale war, such as the two countries have already fooght twice before. But so far, both sides have held back-India because it thinks its objective of a friendly independent East Pakistan might possibly be accompanied by military activity short of war, and Pakistan apparently because Indian forces are superior and because a total war would weaken Pakistan far more than the Indian-supported Bengali independence struggle in East Pakistan already has.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has asked the Indian Parliament and ber people—for a little more time to give the Western powers a chance to pressure Pakistan into a political settlement with the Bangli insurgents. How much time she wants, she has not said.

Many commentators think she is talking in terms of weeks, not months. "India cannot be browbeaten nor lulled into a false sense of security," she told Parliament in ber report on her recent three-week mission to Europe and the United States:

Pessimism Voiced

Indian officials are pessimistic about the outcome of any nego-tiating effort. Reliable sources here report that in the talks Mrs Gandhi and her staff beld in Washington two weeks ago, Nixon administration officials suggested various levels of negotiations between the Pakistani government and representatives of the rebel movement called Bangla Desh (Bengal Nation), which operates most of the time out of Calcutta. The Indians reportedly replied the only man who could possibly negotiate for the Ben-galis is Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, the jailed leader of the East Pakistani independence movement, who is on trial for treason. The Americans are said to have responded that President Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan, who has branded Mulbur a traitor, displays anger at any mention of the Bengall leader.

That is where it was reportedly left, with the Americans saving they would try and the Indians saying they hoped something would come of such efforts. But the Indiana do not think that even Mujibur could sell anything less than full independence to his people—not after all the Bengali blood that has been shed since the Pakistan Army began its offensive last March to crush the secession movement. Moreover, the Indians would insist, as would the Bengali nationalist politicians and fighting forces, that Mujibur be briefed by them on the developments of the last eight months before he could sit down at any negotiating table. Since his imprisonment last March, Muilbur has presumably been told nothing of what has happened in East Pakistan, such as the recent significant successes of the Bengali guerrillas fighting under his name. According to many knowledgeable sources here, the Nixon administration sees the best hope for defusing the situation in a settlement by stages. This would involve a period of autonomy for East Pakisten within the framework of Pakistan and then gradual progress toward independence.

view. But in the opinion of most diplomats here, any Bengali politician who discussed anything short of total independence would be discredited or possibly killed. as the Bengali guerrillas are killing those in East Pakistan who are collaborating with the military government.

The British are said to share this

U.S. Scientists Isolate Virus From Cancer

Grow It in Specimen From Human Cervix

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (NYT).—A virus identified as Herpes Type 2 has been isolated from cells grown artificially from a specimen of human cervical cancer, scientists have reported, This is the same virus that has recently been linked to this kind of cancer by other, less direct evidence. The new report from the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine and the Harvard Medical School said the finding of the virus strengthens the evidence for an association between the virus and cervical eancer, which is one of the major causes of cancer deaths among American women.

The evidence suggests but does not prore, that the cancer is linked to a virus infection transmitted by sexual intercourse. Herpes virus Type 1 is the common virus associated with cold sores. Herpes Type 2, a related but different virus, is known to infect the genital tract. It usually produces no symptoms noticeable to the infected women, During the last year or so, there has been a rapid accumulation of evidence suggesting that the virus may be related to cervical

Studies have shown that, often, women who have had the virus infection later develop either cervical cancer or a condition of the eervix that many doctors consider precancerous.

The evidence for the virus infection is that the women show protective antibodies against that Recent evidence shows that patients with cervical cancer, or the condition thought to be precancerous, have a prevalence of antibodies to the virus significantiy higher than that found in persons who do not have cervical cancer.

The new report is believed to be the first that offers solid evidence for the presence of the human cervical cancer.

Poro—Never Again

By Jan Sjöby

LULEA, Sweden (IHT).—"Poro," said the American reporter after a three-week tour of the Scaninsylan Arctic, "Poro-we've had it for breakfast, lunch, diener and late-night snacks. I'm sick of poro."

"Never," he said, munching a pork chop with French fries, "never again poro."

'He'll come around," said a Finnish journalist, Palle Abbing. "He'll return to the fold. Reindeer meat is addictive like heroin, though a damn sight more healthy; once you start in you are caught. Our American colleague will find it in New York if he looks hard and I'm sure he

The reindeer, Rangifer tarandus, is a close relative of the American caribou and the staple food of most of the Lapps of the Scandinavian Arctic. half-tame animals roam in great herds between summer grazing grounds in the mountain plateaus and winter hideouts in the coastal forest country.

The meat comes in any number of ways—as chunks of smoked fillet to be dipped and scalded in the hot, black, strong, salted Lapp morning coffee; as steak with juniper-flavored game sauce lingonberries; as merrow bones where the marow is pushed out with chopstick-like rods and eaten with boiled, grated reindeer liver. The latter is the ultimate in the Lapp culinary art, Mr. Abbing maintains.

Very popular in Lapland, and way south of the Arctle Circle as well, is smoked reindeer ham or shoulder, banging from a ceiling beam where a between-meals nibbler can cut a chunk whenever in the mood.

Best known outside Scandinayla may be renskav-reindeer shavings; thin slices of the nextto-the-bone meat, laboriously removed, frozen and exported to the Swedes in the south. Some of it goes on across the Oresund and even the Atlantic.

The export is very modest though; the combined export figures for Sweden. Norway and Finland totaled a little over 498 tons in 1968. The Scandinavians would like to export more butas in the case of Belgian beer and Maltese wine-production just about meets domestic needs, The Swedes alone est some 4 million pounds of reindeer meat each year

"The demand in recent years has been terrific," Mr. Abbing "Great enough to have reports. It plagiarized from time to time. Not so long ago New Zealand deer was sold in Sweden ac 'reindeer'."

There is a reverse trend as well. The reindeer, in the opinion of some importers, isn't considered quite housebroken.

"One example of many," says Mr. Abbing. "A consignment of frozen reindeer fillet was sold from Sweden to Finland, which re-exported it to Denmark. The Danish importer slapped a ventson fillet' label over the original 'reindeer' tag. For some reason the consignment went on to Switzerland, where a label reading 'wood elk fillet' was superimposed on the other two. For some mysterious reason, the meat was resold again to—of all places—Finland, where the foreign labels were removed, one by one." Reindeer meat used to be considered a hit savage by the Swedes, south of the Lapland "There is a gamey taste to it," "It was a lot gamler a few Pears ago." he adds, "when the old slaughtering methods were still practiced. The reindeer were running around-always counterclockwise for some reason-in the slaughtering grounds corral, smelling the blood from the slaughtering pens. They were panicky, naturally. Then they were lassoed and dragged into the pens themselves. The adrenalin content rose in the bloodstream and lodged in the mest of the slaughtered animal, making it more gamey than it needed to be.".

"Medea," directed by Pier Paolo. Pasolini, "is not completely succentral but it is so full of ecsion that I'd rather sit through the 13 worst minutes of it than the five best minutes of Michael Cacorannia's reverential adapta-tion of The Troisn Wemen," says Vincent Canby. Under Passiin's direction, Maria Calles becomes a fascinating presence possessed with a power that has I suspect, less to do with an ability to act, in conventional terms, sayway, than with her grace of movement. and with her magnificent face. Medea' is uneven, but I admire the reckless courage of its conlop, even when it goes wrong. When it is right, it is superb."

"The Railway Children" is "a perfectly lovely little British movte, taken from E. Neshiti's chil-dren's classic," declares Roward Thompson. "Children will adore it, and any adult who speers deserves to find Andy Warhol in his Christmas stocking. For this one, we can thank Lionel Jeffries, that fine veteran actor and director of a simple tale about three children who putter around a Yorkshire village, sharing a loving kindness learned at home. Young Jenny Agutter is especially good as the oldest girl."

"Bless the Beasts & Children" is directed by Stanley Kramer, who "divides his attention between buffalo, which are going to be shot, and a group of six right-minded missit rich kids who set out to save them," Roger Greenspun writes. "The kids, you see, are really like buffalo-trapped and endangered species and

> "Magic of the Kite," second in a series of children's movies being presented by the Xerox Corp. "is good for youngsters up to about 11 years of age," says Howard Thompson. "This is a genuinely diverting offering for the small fry, with some hullt-in surprises. For one thing, it is a rare coproduction of Paris and Peking moviemakers, intermingling locales and young performers of both countries. Thanks to some excellent English dubbing, the Erench poungsters sound like real, applepie children down the block. A pretty Feking girl serves as an English interpreter in the Chinese sequences. The story ends with a nice plea for international harmony, as exemplified by childheod playmates. Chief credit should go to Roger Pigant, that fine French actor, who pileted the project as director and co-screen writer from his original story,"

"Who Killed Mary Whate'er-name!" directed by Ernig Pintoff and starring Red Buttons, is about a "former lightweight boxand diabetic, and rich, who reads. about Mary's murder in the paper and sets out to solve it for the sole, simple (and unsatisfactory) reason that nowadays nobody cares anymore, writes Roger Greenspun, "Mr. Pintoff's movie story, which vacillates between the ridiculous and the commonplace without ever hitting the adequate, and the intrusive gracelessness of Pintoff's direction. The first assures that by the time you really do find out who killed Mary Whats'ername you don't much care. By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS (IHT).-Le Club d'O on the Rue Princesse is the latest Paris discothèque and one of the fanciest. 'Innocent' Asian Firms Hit by U.S. Moves At the beginning orders for many

By William D. Hartley SEOUL, South Korea, Nov. 18 (AP-DJ1.-Small businesses in Asian nations are being squeezed by a series of U.S.-Initiated economic moves.

Businessmen contend that they are innocent bystanders caught in the world monetary crisis. Struggling to build industry, the less advanced Aslan nations say their development could be sct back for years.

The developing countries have been hit in rapid succession by the U.S. import surcharge, the U.S.-induced float of the Japanese yen and the rigid textlie quotas ou exports to the United States, "America shouldn't punish all countries for what Japan bas produced," complains a Taiwauese businessman.

Textile exports to the United Hong Kong are minuscule compared with those from Japan, However, they make up a big proportion of those countries' exports-nearly half in the case of Korea and Talwan

Most important, these nations feel, is the expected revaluation of the yea. The smaller countries buy capital goods and industrial raw materials from Japan. Because corporate profit margins are often smail, firms in these nations cannot afford the bigher prices for the Japanese goods

Export Orders In Japan Seen Nearly Normal

TOKYO, Nov. 18.—The signing of new export contracts, which almost came to an end after President Richard Nixon's new economic measures were an-nounced in August, is beginning to regain normality, an official of Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry said yesterday. Elmei Yamashita, director of the ministry's international trade bureau, told foreign correspon-products were canceled becausa of the extra levy, but businessmen are seeing many of thesa renewed. "The surcharge is only likely to affect items that are marginally competitive against U.S. products," saya Jock Kite, secretary of the Hong Kong general chamber of commerce. The surcharge does burt Asians, however, when weak companies deal with big U.S. buyers. Here an unexpected factor is developing. The Nixon administration's idea was to pass the cost to the U.S. consumer so he would shun imported goods and turn to U.S .orade products. But U.S. buyers are trying to force Aslan pro-ducers to absorb the added duty by lowering their prices. In every Asian country, busi-nessmen report demands of varying degrees by U.S. buyers that the producer share the surcharge burden. "Some say all, some say 50-50," says J.P. Lee, secretary general of the Chinese Manufacturers Association in Hong Kong. A more serious problem is the textile quotas. In mid-October the United States signed with Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong agreements limiting export growth in the man-made fiber textiles to 7.5 percent annually above the period from April 1970 to March 1971; growth in wool fabrics is limited to 1 percent. Last year, for example, exports from Korea were up 40 percent from the year before. Hwal Lee, president of the Korean Traders Association estimates the cutbacks will cost Korea from $800 million to $900 million over five years in lost foreign exchange. Textile officials in Asta say the and express amazement at the U.S. turnaround. Years ago, Korean textile men say, they were told that U.S. foreign aid would expire in a few years and that it was up to them to earn foreign exchange by developing exports. They did so, the Koreans argue bitterly, only to have a major portion of their earning power taken away from them.

N.Y. Prices Fall, Volume Rises Slightly

Turnaround Follows Two Days of Advance

By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW YORK, Nov. 18 (NYT). Real estate investment trusts, one of the stock market's favorite winning groups in recent months, broke sharply in price today to dominate a jittery session on tha New York Stock Exchange.

The general market moved ahead in the morning to continue the steady tone of the two previous trading days. However, weakness developed during the afternoon and by the closing bell both the real estate group and leading glamour issues were in fuil retreat.

Plummeting 6.79 points, the Dow Jones industrial average finished at 815.35. Volume rose to 13.01 milion shares from 12.34 million yesterday.

The Dow average was only slightly above its Monday close at 819.53-the poorest level of 1971 —and many Wall Streeters expect another test of the 1971 low to develop shortly.

Six of the 15 most-active issues were real estate investment trust stocks and they all sbowed substantial losses. The allde was set into motion by an interview appearing in to-day's New York Times. Durand A. Holladay, secretary and trustee of Continental Mortgage Inves-tors, predicted that the fast-growing sector may he heading for a dramatic slowdown in earnings.

Mr. Holladay also disclosed that that Continental plunged 4 1/2 to 14 1/2 as the biggest percentage loser on the entire New York Stock Exchange. The other five real estate trust issues on the active list showed these declines: C. I. Mortgage Group, down 2 1/2 to 23; North American Mortgage Investors down 4 7/8 to 30 1/4; Diversified Mortgage Investors, off 3 5/8 to 28 1/4; Continental Illinois Realty, off 4 7/8 to 30 1/4, and Mony Mortgage Investors, off 1 7/8 to Tha eight largest percentage declines on the Big Board occurred in this group. A key reason for recent popularity of this group is that, at time when dividend increases basically are limited to 4 percent for 1972, government guidelines allow the group to pass through virtually all of its income to shareboiders. Among weak glamours. TBM lost 6 1/4 to 294 3/4, Honeywell 7/8 to 108 1/2 and Polarold 4 3/4 to 86 5/8.

American Stock Exchange prices feli, with 571 issues declining. 267 advancing and the exchange index down 'g to 23.92. On the bond market prices were helped for awhile by re-ported Federal Reserve buying of coupons but corporates were up only 1.8 at the close and government intermediates closed about unchanged. The corporate sector was set into action early in the day when the Detroit Edisons broke from syndicate and reached the open market at about a 3 point discount. Dealers last quoted the Detroits at 97 1/2-5/8.

Export-Import Bank of the United States

Five-year 5.70% Debentures-Price 100% plus accrued interest

Series 1976-A. New issue, dated December 1, 1971, due December 1, 1976

These debentures are direct obligations of the Export-Import Bank of the United States ("Eximbank"), a wholly owned corporate agency of the United States. The Attorney General of the United States has stated in an opinion dated September 30, 1966 that Eximbank's contractual liabilities constitute general obligations of the United States backed by its full faith and credit and that persons in whose favor it has incurred contractual liabilities in accordance with law "have acquired valid general obligations of the United States, and are therefore in a position to reach beyond Eximbank and its assets to the United States for a source of payment, if necessary." Interest on the debentures is subject to federal income taxes. The debentures are not subject to the Interest Equalization Tax. It is expected that the debentures in definitive form will be available for delivery on or about December 1, 1971. The debentures are issuable in registered or coupon form in denominations of $5,000, $10,000, $25,000, $100,000, $500,000, and $1,000,000. Interest on the debentures is payable semi-annually on June 1 and December 1 in each year. The principal of, together with the last installment of interest on, registered debentures is payable at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and, under certain circumstances, at the Federal Reserve Banks of Chicago and San Francisco, upon surrender of debentures at such banks. Checks for interest on registered debentures (other than the last installment of . interest) will be mailed. Principal of and interest on coupon debentures are payable at the Federal Reserve Banks of New York, Chicago and San Francisco. The debentures are not redeemable prior to maturity. This announcement is under no circumstances to be construed as an offer to sell or as a solicitation of an offer to buy any of these securities. The offering is made only by the prospectus, which may be obtained in any state in which this announcement is circulated from only such of the undersigned or other persons as may lawfully offer these securities in such state.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

Since his first book appeared in New York in 1967, a Scot named Hugh Kelsey has established himself as one of the world's great bridge writers. In his fourth book, "Improve Your Bridge," published recently by Hart at $4.95, Keisey is his usual incisive self. He crowds more sound advice into 191 pages than many pundits would do in double the space.

In the area of bidding, however, many of the author's comments are inapplicable or mis-leading for those using American styles. Fortunately the book is primarily concerned with declarer play and defense, in which areas all players speak virtually the same language.

In the chapter entitled "Missing Easy Inferences" Kelsey cites the diagramed deal.

South has opened three hearts, and North has leaped impetuously to six hearts over West's three-spade overcall. He should perhaps have used Blackwood, since South's heart suit might have been headed by the queen,

West led the spade ace and shifted to a diamond. South won with the king, led to the heart king, and finessed unsuccessfully in trumps; down one. He had based his play on the fact that West was marked with length in spades and was therefore likely to be short in hearts, but he had missed an important inference. If the defenders are good players-admittedly a sizable "if"— the declarer should have no doubt what to do. At the second trick he should put himself in West's shoes. When West sees the dummy he must reckon that his best chance defeat the contract is a trump trick. So if West has a singleton trump he will surely play a second spade at once, forcing dummy to ruff. If East has Q x x, this would make it impossible for the declarer to finesse in trumps.

This is a valid inference, although perhaps not a cast-iron one. If West held a singleton club and a singleton heart, the diamond shift might seem desirable to him, attacking dummy's eventual side entry before the clubs can be established.

reflections of the New York magazine scene? I'll hazard no final conclusions. Charles Simmons is the author of "Powdered Fggs," a novel that won the William Faulkner Award for Notable First Novels, and an editor on a prominent weekly book-review supplement. Oliver Bacon, the hero of Mr. Simmons's second novel, "An Old-Fashioned Darling," is also an editor on a magasine. But the magazine is Quiff, a "very vulgar" girlie sheet, so any roman-à-cleffing here must be left to the devices of the Ollie, we discover, is badly en-tangled in a series of affairs with women he has code-named Long Island, Florida and Brooklyn. If Florida isn't threatening Long Island with exposure, then Brooklyn is threatening Ollie with pregnancy. So Ollie decides for cellbacy and discovers to his growing wonder that the vocation is salutary: his tennis game improves maliciously; he is suddenly capable of double-cushion shots in pool.

But long it cannot be. Given the circumstances of employment at Quiff, his renunciation is not practical. While his newfound resources enable him to resist the temptations set before him by his fellow-workers and his boss (a figurehead with aristocratic credentials), and to rise momentarily to the editorship he has secretly coveted, his subsequent plans to "purify" Quiff do not lie well with management. And we last see Ollie out of work and involved with a member of the chaste order of St. Theresa. All of which has its quixotically farcical aspects and provokes its share of chortles, but is eventually disorganized in its implications and a disappointment after the promise of "Powdered Eggs."

Hollis Alpert is not so quixotic or maniacal in "The People Eaters"; nor are the sources of his history so obscure. His novel opens at the funeral of the founder and editor of New York's most sophisticated weekly—an inappropriately bluff fellow who was given to punctuating his remarks with a lot of "goddam-mits." Who will succeed him as the leader of Metropolitan? Will it be Mort Bellish, the shy and retiring editor whose strength is working with manuscripts and whose loyalties are to the past? Or will it be Robert Mackey, the gregarious idea man who wants Metropolitan to jump with the changing times?

Predictably, the founder's will and testament points to shy Mort Bellish, and the board of directors concurs. Mackey quits and starts up a Sunday supplement called New York Scene, whose aim it will be to swing with the new New York and whose pages will feature, among others, Lester Shryock, a dyspeptic drama critic who abominates Broadway; Peter Kloss, a go-out-and-kill-'em investigative reporter; and lovely

ARE these two novels accurate Norma Cole, a former Newsfront editor who sports large, round tinted sunglesses and the miniest of miniskirts, and who will do anything, but anything, for a hot

Things do not go well for New York Scene at first; in fact it falls as a supplement. But Mackey has the guts to go independent. hustles up backers from among his chic friends, and runs a three part exposé of Metropolitan that reveals all sorts of hanky panky behind its sedate façade. His magazine gets off and running. Meanwhile, the beat of the big city goes on, everybody keeps sliding in and out of everybody's bed, and we are steered toward the conclusion that life in the mag-azine industry is as nasty, brutisn, and short as things in Thomas

Hobbes's state of nature. Or at least we are steered within view of that conclusion. For everyone in the story appears in the ugliest possible light. Bellish, the shy Metropolitan editor, has a secret affair with his secretary, gets her pregnant, and tries to cover up. Shryock, the iraselble drama critic, is sexually impotent, traumatized by bad going with a female French professor of his youth Mackey, the swinger, is a philanderer and morally shortcircuited. And beautiful Norma Cole, the advocate of women's lib and the coming woman of the seventies, is a Lesbian and a whore. But after all, it is Hollis' Alpert who is imagining this story. And we can only resist that fact as long as his story remains

Which it finally does not. For once New York Scene gets established and Mr. Alpert has nothing more from the public record to play with, he introduces a mad authoress to shoot Mackey down, and nominates Norma Cole as his successor. And at this point, with the public record providing no support, we are forced to fall back on Mr. Alpert's sensibilities as the source of his story's logic.

Those sensibilities are peculiar. Although the story is told from an omniscient point of view, thered is a preoccupation with sexua; endowments that is oddly slanted for instance, we are never told of the male characters' sexual at: tributes; we only hear of ample female thighs and breasts. It is as if some double standard had smote the observer's eye. So when all surface logic breaks down in the story; when we are completely at the mercy of Mr. Alpert's sensibilities, and when we are finally asked to regard the awful trony of Norma Cole's becoming editor of New York Scene and being subsequently celebrated for realizing "her full creative poten-tial while maintaining her attractive femininity," instead of shivering, we wonder.

Is it life in the media that is so despicable? Or is it Hollis Alpert's imagination that is nasty, brutish and short?

NEW YORK, Nov. 18 (UPI) .-Avery Brundage, president of tite International Olympic Committee, said yesterday that China would be velcomed back into the Olympic fold as loog as to agreed to comply with the IOC rules and regulations,

But he didn't think there was ouy chance the Chinese would be competing in the 1972 Games at Sapporo, Japan, and Munich.

Brundage said, "The objective of the Olympic movement is to unite the youth of the world, and nil countries are welcome, in-cluding the People's Republic of China-with the proviso that they must agree to follow the Olympic code and to abide by the Olympic rules and regulations."

Brundage, in a radio interview in Finland, recalled that China withdrew from the IOC 15 years ago, refusing to compete at Melbourne because Talwan was going to be in Australia. "They [China] have to reapply for membership," Brundage said. "They have to agree to comply with the rules. And then there's the fact that Talwan is still a member, is recognized, and will be eligible to compete. So, if the People's Repoblic adheres to its Brundage took sharp with a statement last month by president Urho Kekkonen of Finland, who charged the IOC Was a non-democratic. selfperpetuating body of wealthy persons.

Kekkonen suggested the IOC he made part of UNESCO—the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

"Sure it is a self-perpetuating body," be admitted. "But that's the reason for its outstanding success. One country, one voteas practiced in the UN-would be ridiculous, as the UN, with five countries holding powers, has found out too late."

The New Billingsgate

Observer

By Russell Baker

cline. Here, to cite a case fresh out of the mailbog, is a letter from an angry man in the Bronx who is deligbted that the H-bomb went off in Alaska recently and especially pleased, hs says, to see that the explosion was not stopped by "the eco-rad-lib-pinko set."

Matters are in a sorry state when an angry man, reaching for billingsgate with which to smite the political foe, is forced to "eco-rad-libpinko set." At first glance, the term doesn't even look abusive; it sounds like one of those kits people give boys for Christmas for building toy skyscrapers.

Political abuse is an ancient, if not honored, tradition in politics everywhere. To a great ex-tent political debate in America begins and ends with political abuse Lately, however, there has been a disturbing decline in style. In the slightly better-though not mucb—old days, be might have been speared as a "Commie" or jeered with devastating effectiveness as "a muddle-head-Nowadays the verbal knife aimed cleanly at the back appears to be going out of use. In fts place we see developing a complex style of billingsgate which is not only based on mysterious words difficult for the uninitiated to grasp, but is also hard to pronounce. This, indeed, is decadence. The Bronx man's "eco-rad-libpinko set" obviously owes some-thing to Vice-President Agnew's "radiclib," another fairly new abuse term which, in the pussyfooting manner of the new billingsgate, is meant to suggest that the person so described might just possibly-mind now, we're not saying this for sure, as we are all gentlemen here-might just possibly be "soft on Communism." It would be wrong to suggest that the rightwingers are solely to blame for the debasement of American political abuse. In fact,

ANNOUNCEMENTS

WASHINGTON.—Political abuse it is the New Left that has done in America is in B sad de- most to take the zing out of the discourse of smear.

> Once, when Americans did not hesitate to speak out with Republican simplicity, men on the left stood up and yelled "fascist!" at anybody who disagreed with them. It was silly, but it sorted things out quickly. You did not have to sit around digesting polysyllabic jawbreakers and mindbenders, as you do nowadays when the New Left goes on the attock

Two points about the new style: First, the abusive terms hardly ever sound abusive. "Radiclib" might be a vegetable, or maybe a bicycle. Only the initiate—the man who is already in on the political scene-can tell, without asking, that it is supposed to be something bad. Same for "liberal élitist." "establishmentarian," "power structure," "genocidal pol-

Second, rightwing abose tends to favor punchy Morse code neologisms, created by running parts of words together, as in "radiclib," which seems to derive from "ra-dical" and "liberal"—how can you he both at the same time without being the much more vulnerable "nuts"? And "Comsymp," a com-bine of "Communist" and "sympathizer." Leftwing abuse words, by contrast, are never abbreviat-ed. Thus, no "libelits," no "powstruc," no "genpol."

The New Left, apparently, prefers verbosity to communication On both sides there is an obvious attempt to create new forms of abuse.

The same trend is apparent in the student movements, black movements, women's liberation. Each group is making up its own language of abuse, which doesn't sound abusive at all to the "oppressor," who doesn't even realize most of the time that the "oppressor" is not a machine used at the dry-cleaning plant, and doesn't know that he is not being flattered when women call him

What kind of political abuse is it that requires the abuser to explain to the oppressor that he has just been called a rat? Decadent abuse. That's what. America de-serves billingsgate with more

Out of the Rubbish—an Arab Capital

By Helen Gibson

CAIRO (IHT).—George Scanlon talked in Arabic to a tall, robed man, then, as the man rejoined the throng of chanting diggers, groaned theatrically: "How I long for a library, never to have to direct men again. Six years is enough."

Mr. Scanlon, who was born in Philadelphia, leads an archaeological team that, for the past six years, has been burrowing its way through a centuriesold rubbish heap to uncover Fustat, the Arab capital of Egypt between the 7th and 12th centuries.

A graduate of Swarthmore College who holds a doctorate in Middle Eastern history from Princeton, Mr. Scanion main-tains that "all I ever wanted to be is a bartender." Nevertheless, since 1959 he has been associated with the American Research Center in Egypt, which is un-derwritten by funds administered by the Smithsonian Institution.

When he isn't digging at Fustat. Mr. Scanlon is a senior associate fellow of St. Anthony's College at Oxford where he lectures on Islamic history, culture and art. "Do you think anyone ever hears about this?" he asked, waving at the dig, a collection of deep holes and broken-brick foundations, blending with the surrounding rubble. "Oh, no. Because Fustat is an Islamic city. Because we have the greatest intellectual mental block ever. There is nothing worse than the Christian-classical-Egyptology syndrome. In these parts, if it is not Greco-Roman, pharonic or Biblical, forget it.

of shale on the outskirts of Cairo, within sight of Egypt's first mosque, a group of 1500year-old Coptic Christian churches and an ancient, stillfrequented synagogue. To the untrained eye, it looks quite dull. To Scanlon's team-comprised of two Polish experts. Dr. Vladislaw Kubiac of Warsaw University and Anthony Ostrasz of Warsaw Polytechnic, and 150 Egyptian workers-Fustat looks as exciting as anything in the Valley of Kings.

The dig lies on a wilderness

George Scanlon on the site of Fustat.

When Mr. Scanion starts to explain what Pustat is all about desolate plain disappears and six-storied houses spring up with marble fountains playing on their balconies. Narrow, cool streets appear with brightly lit market stalls.

While Europe struggled through the Dark Ages, Fustat thrived as one of the world's great entrepots—a bustling port on the Nile, a flourishing industrial and commercial center, a city that imported porcelain from China and took weekly baths by law and daily ones by choice. All houses of any size in Fustat had private baths. "The city sanitation system equals anything produced by the Greeks and Romans," Mr. Scanlon said, peering down a smooth 35-foot-deep cesspool.

"They had toilets on every floor in Fustat, running water in terracotta pipes and public covered drains that were cleaned out once a day with sand and water while Europe was still throwing her slops out of windows onto the street."

Mr. Scanlon hopes his research will have an impact on economic history. "I would feel my six years on the dig wasted if this work did not change the way historians treat economics of this period." It is his contention that medievalists give short shrift to the economic importance of Fustat before the mid-12th century.

One of his discoveries has already caused a stir in archaeological circles. In a cesspool, the team unearthed a goblet that indicated that the delicate art of glass lustering may have been a decoration technique developed and perfected in Egypt, rather than in Persia. The goblet is, he says, the first datable piece of instered glass in Islamic art.

The main obstacles to progress at Fustat are the mounds, 25 feet high, of accumulated refuse that cover the city. After the decline of the city, the site was chosen as an ideal spot for garbage, an idea endorsed by centuries of trash-dumpers. On e hot day, the smalls that waft around the diggers leave little doubt either to the origin of the mounds or of the cesspools. Mr. Scanlon's team is not too concerned about individual finds, or, as he puts it, "yet another glazed pot." The aims and concepts of archaeology 50 years ago were different from those of today. Then it was important to accumulate individual objects, and, in fact, half a century ago, this same general area yielded many of the exhibits on display in Cairc's Islamic Museum.

"Now we are more interested in finding out how people lived and worked, their industries and crafts, their street plans and sanitation systems." Mr. Scanlon said.

He pointed to an area about a mile from where he stood. Within the next few years, he bopes to begin digging there confirm estimates that Fustat stretched over a 15-squaremile area and had 300,000 to 500,000 inhabitants. But Mr. Scanion knows that time may be running out. Only a few hundred yards away to the north, a mass of low-cost apartment houses prevent further excavations. Only luck and effort kept new construction off the present site.

"Our problem is a race against urbanization and the rousing of enough interest to Egypt, if it's Islamic, who cares? If it's late, it's bad. That's the PEOPLE: Garbo? Cecil Beaton? A Love Affair?
